

Hancock House Publishers Sasquatch Awareness Center

In conjunction with the selection of the sasquatch as one of the 2010 Winter Olympics mascots, Hancock House Publishers is pleased to provide this presentation for those who wish to know the real story behind this fascinating creature.

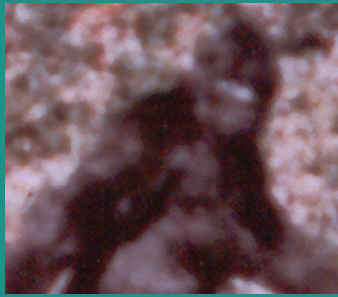

The images provided of a sasquatch, related artifacts, or other subjects, are from the files of the major sasquatch researchers in the North West. This material has been exhibited at two major city museums. As such, it is the main material available supporting the existence of sasquatch.

The material was made available to Christopher L. Murphy for exhibit purposes and for his books. A comprehensive listing of contributors is provided at the back of the presentation on the exhibit at the Vancouver Museum (British Columbia, Canada).

This initiative was undertaken by Hancock House Publishers/Hancock House Wildlife Foundation in cooperation with Chris Murphy for general public education/information on the sasquatch, or bigfoot, the name for the creature in the United States of America.
